DEVELOPMENT POLITICS, DECOLONIAL THEORIES AND MENSTRUATION

Michela Accerenzi
PhD student at the Universidad del País Vasco/Euskal Herriko Unibertsitatea
2017 Conference of the Society for Menstrual Cycle Research “Menstrual Health: Research, Representation and Re-Education”
Kennesaw State University, June 23th, 2017
INTRODUCTION

- Gender shapes bodies
- My whiteness
- Them/us
- Menstruation: ¿something in common or still them/us?
BODY POLITICS IN DEVELOPMENT AND MENSTRUATION

- Development / development politics
- Body politics in development
- “The Third World Woman”
- Menstruation – MHM
DECOLONIAL FEMININS

- Modernity / Colonization of America
- Epistemic violence / Subalterns
- Coloniality of power, coloniality of knowledge, coloniality of the Self and coloniality of gender
- Modern Colonial System of Gender
- Gender – White Woman
- Patriarchal Junction
- Language
A FEMINIST DECOLONIAL APPROACH TO BODY POLITICS AND MENSTRUATION

- Discomfort -> oppressed/oppressors
- See from the eyes of the subalterns
- Gender typification, surveillance and accountability
- Menstruation as a social and political issue with cultural particularities
- How the intersection of gendered and racialized messages affect the experience of menstruation